
Free foreclosure Web site begins offering listings in San Diego County

Tuesday, July 10, 2007

ForeclosurePoint.com announced Tuesday it has begun listing foreclosure properties in the San Diego market for a large base of homebuyers and real estate investors looking to purchase foreclosed properties.

The company says it is the first service offering users free access to foreclosure property listings, including the address, property details and estimated opening bid.

The service also provides resources to real estate agents enabling them to provide their clients with expert assistance in the purchase of a foreclosure property, according to the company.

"Given today's complex process for purchasing foreclosure properties and market inefficiencies, 99 percent of homebuyers, as well as real estate investors, are unable to participate in this market," said Chief Marketing Officer Chris Matty. "We are transforming the industry with innovation, opening up the foreclosure market to a much larger pool of buyers."
